Deadline to register: 15 March 2019

Come to the heart of the Mediterranean and learn about the evolving security agenda and the importance of the rule of law...

- Gain a multi-faceted perspective on challenges, threats, and opportunities affecting the Mediterranean region, with a particular focus on the issue areas of migration, human security and terrorism.
- Examine key forces that shape the Mediterranean security landscape and the role that rule of law plays in underpinning security in the region.
- Sharpen your analytical skills and learn how your organization might best adapt and respond to ongoing challenges in the Mediterranean.
- Network and interact with a diverse array of policymakers, academics, government officials, and business executives.

Taught at the University of Malta by leading experts in the field, the Mediterranean Security & Rule of Law Course will provide participants with in-depth understanding of the various security challenges currently affecting the Mediterranean region, with a particular focus on the issue areas of terrorism, migration and human security. Apart from academic lectures, the course will also include simulation exercises, visits to international organizations, discussions with high-level policy makers, as well as visits to historical sites in Malta.
